

Submission of AIAA Conference Papers to Journals

General Instructions

If your paper meets the archival criteria listed below, you should submit it to one of the journals of AIAA for consideration for publication.

Submitting your paper to a journal of AIAA is simple: Access the WriteTrack system at <http://www.writetrack.net> and select one journal only (see the Journal Scopes document). Follow the WriteTrack prompts so that all required information is input. Be sure to indicate that the paper is not classified and has not been submitted for publication elsewhere and to provide your complete contact information. Supply the names and contact information of five suggested reviewers. Upload your double-spaced manuscript on WriteTrack. You may simplify formatting requirements by using the optional Journals Template (Microsoft Word version only).

Conference papers (reformatted single column, double spaced) should be submitted prior to the meeting presentation if you want to minimize processing time. However, please include all relevant conference information (name of conference, location, dates, and, if available, your assigned paper number). Conference papers submitted to the journals should be as brief and concise as proper presentation of the ideas will allow.

Archival Criteria

1. The paper should be of lasting interest and should contain original, quantitative, detailed technical material, set into perspective relative to prior work and supported by literature references and specific technical accomplishments.
2. It should emphasize the technical nature of the work, avoiding mention of organizational names and/or the accomplishments of a particular organization.
3. If it deals with facilities for testing and evaluating systems, it must relate technical details to an advance in the state of the art.
4. It should avoid the presentation of program information (schedules, future plans).
